FINDINGS: The Filipino Social Heritage District is a Subarea within the Western SoMa District that possesses concentrations of local cultural valuables, sometimes materialized sites, streets, buildings, sometimes perpetuated in memory through the celebration of the historic use and meaning, quality and importance which contributes to the attractiveness and richness of the City.

PURPOSE: This designation is intended to promote the health, safety, prosperity and welfare of the people of the City through the effectuation of the purposes set forth in Section 1101 of Article 11 and the maintenance of the scale and character of the area by:
(a) The protection and preservation of the basic cultural values of assets insofar as these values are compatible with Western SoMa District;
(b) Providing scope for the continuing vitality of the new cultural district through private renewal and sensitive creativity, within appropriate controls and standards. It is intended to foster a climate in which the Filipino Social Heritage District may thrive as a prime Bay Area ethnic cultural district
(c) The maintenance of an identity separate from other districts

FINDINGS: The Filipino Social Heritage District is a Subarea within the Western SoMa District that possesses concentrations of local cultural valuables, sometimes materialized sites, streets, buildings, sometimes perpetuated in memory through the celebration of the historic use and meaning, quality and importance which contributes to the attractiveness and richness of the City.

PURPOSE: This designation is intended to promote the health, safety, prosperity and welfare of the people of the City through the effectuation of the purposes set forth in Section 1101 of Article 11 and the maintenance of the scale and character of the area by:
(a) The protection and preservation of the basic cultural values of assets insofar as these values are compatible with Western SoMa District;
(b) Providing scope for the continuing vitality of the new cultural district through private renewal and sensitive creativity, within appropriate controls and standards. It is intended to foster a climate in which the Filipino Social Heritage District may thrive as a prime Bay Area ethnic cultural district
(c) The maintenance of an identity separate from other districts
The proposed Filipino Social Heritage District aims to perpetuate the Filipino heritage in Western SoMa. It highlights the long-standing cultural institutions in the neighborhood as they have served as places of worship, for community services, for arts expression, and as sites for cultural activities and events in the same manner “a plaza” would function in the Philippines. The proposed district includes several sites that host folkloric events, and streets named after Philippine national heroes. So far, the community working with the San Francisco Planning Department and Western SoMa Citizens Planning Task Force has:

1. Identified and classified individual assets giving priority to institutions, non-profit organizations and events
2. Created a map that establishes clear boundaries based on the proposed Western SoMa Light Industrial & Residential District (Page & Turnbull, March 31, 2009).
3. Organized the district emulating a Filipino Plaza (typical Spanish public open space urban element, and deeply rooted in the indigenous communities in the Philippines)
4. Delineated a tourist ritualistic path, following the steps of The Parol Lantern Festival (Filipino Xmas celebration in the Philippines and in the South of Market)
5. Mapped the district and evaluated assets.
6. Worked with the Western SoMa Task Force to develop a neighborhood and citywide understanding of the post WW II “social heritage landscape” that includes using community benefit funds to support the retention of social heritage assets.
7. Developed recommendations on the future use of the Filipino assets if they were to be remodeled, renovated, restored, or demolished by establishing a Community Committee and rules for Certificate of Appropriateness.

The Filipino Social Heritage District, also known as SoMa Pilipinas, has evolved as a conception of a territorial-based ethnic identity in America. SoMa Pilipinas has emerged as a framework of uniting the Filipinos in the Bay area into one community system or an ideation of whole community, which in Filipino is called sambayanan, particularly linking the Filipinos to the center or plaza, or kabayanan (i.e. the heart of the community), which is strategically located in South of Market.

The Filipino Social Heritage District (SoMa Pilipinas), as a reference to a Filipino community in a neighborhood that is strong, visible and consolidated, with a compact and critical mass of community members and leaders, is becoming a living cultural landmark worth sharing. It is connected to the Filipino community’s rich heritage from their homeland (Philippines) as well in their new homeland (USA).

STANDARDS FOR DESIGNATION

The Filipino American Foundation has identified more than 25 culturally important sites, buildings, and objects as well as proposed boundaries to establish a Filipino Social Heritage District. The Foundation has been working on this project for several years and has the support of various agencies.

The community is using the National Standards for Cultural designation to label Filipino resources based on the following criteria. A property meets at least one of the following:

1) Is identified with important events in the local community
2) Is associated with lives of historic personages, important to local history
3) Embodies the distinctive characteristics of style, type or period, or method of construction, or represents a notable work of a master designer, builder or architect, or possesses high artistic values to the local community
4) Has yielded, or has potential to yield information important to the history of the local community
5) Demonstrates historic significance because it reflects or exemplifies contributions from local residents

LOCATION AND BOUNDARIES

The ongoing proposal to designate and declare a Filipino Social Heritage District is a Western SoMa Community Plan recommendation that is coterminous with the Western SoMa Light Industrial & Residential Historic District (shown in the map above with the broken blue boundary).

Although some of the Filipino assets will fall outside the Western SoMa district boundary, the Western SoMa Plan supports the creation of this Filipino social cultural heritage district as part of a broader recognition of cultural resources embedded in the history of the urban landscape of Western SoMa.

The district also extends to key sections in South of Market and downtown San Francisco, particularly South Park (for Gran Oriente Filipino Hotel and Masonic Temple), Union Square (Dewey Tower and Maiden Lane formerly named Manila Avenue) and Market and New Montgomery (Palace Hotel and Dr. Jose Rizal's Marker).

The extending of the district boundaries has historical significance and cultural contexts. The North of Market (Dewey Tower at Union Square) commemorates the entry of the U.S. in the Pacific War (Spanish-American 1898 and Philippine American War 1899-1913) that brought enormous prosperity to the City of San Francisco while the South of Market significantly establishes the coming and continuous settlement of Filipinos in San Francisco.
The Social Heritage Filipino District proposes to be differentiated from other districts with urban design elements such as:

- a gateway treatment separating the historic district from the Western SoMa Light Industrial & Residential Historic District
- street lighting standards, delineating a path of the Parol Lantern Festival and highlighting various streets that carry names from Filipino heroes
- pavement treatments and other similar urban elements to identify specific location of events

The Path: Lantern Festival: The Philippines take great pride in celebrating Christmas. The Parol Lantern is the quintessential Filipino symbol of hope, blessings, peace and light during the holiday season. In the Philippines, parol adorns the houses, commercial establishments, churches, public places and street lamp posts. The San Francisco Lantern Parade began in 2003 in South of Market. It is the Filipino community’s gift and contribution to the multicultural fabrics of San Francisco. The parade of lights stretches from the Bayanihan Community Center at 6th and Mission, and culminates in a celebration with performances at Yerba Buena Gardens. The Festival is a special point of pride not only to the Bay Area’s Filipino community but also to the South of Market neighborhood.

The Filipino community is proposing to perpetuate the Parol Lantern Festival as a tourist-ritualistic path with permanent lanterns in the public lighting features along the path.

JUSTIFICATION

Filipino people arrived in San Francisco and made South of Market their home, as well as their place of work, recreation and worship around the 1940s. Today, the Filipino community is maintaining traditions such as the Parol Lantern Festival, upholding a strong sense of identity in the neighborhood, and in their places of worship.

Churches were important to Irish, Filipino and other catholic immigrants as a bedrock institution of traditional culture and identity. St. Joseph’s Parish (pictured below) for example is not only the oldest Catholic Church in South of Market and a city landmark, but it also served for decades as a place of worship for the Filipino community. The parishioners moved to St. Patrick’s Church when St. Joseph’s Church (a San Francisco designated Landmark building) was permanently closed after the 1989 earthquake.

The Plaza and the typical Filipino Town

It was the church with convento (building where priests, religious brothers, sisters or nuns live); that endowed the plaza. The plazas were Spain’s urban legacy that came with many other architectural elements such as patios and fountains from the Islamic World and spread throughout many countries ruled by the Spanish Empire.

The traditional grid pattern of the colonial Latin American city (and the Philippines), placed the main plaza at the center of the political, religious, and social life of its inhabitants. The Spanish colonial elite enjoyed the newly constructed plazas and gardens as spaces for socializing, gossiping, and ostentatiously demonstrating their wealth and power. \(^1\) The different uses of these plazas by many cities’ residents set significantly different cultural meanings associated with dramatic changes that took place in urban Latin America.

Plazas served as the symbolic manifestation of Spanish power, as each plaza had buildings representing the two main colonizing institutions: the church and the crown. Therefore, plazas were typically a central square surrounded by a church, government buildings, and bordered by arched walkways.

Unlike Chinatowns where you can find an array of Chinese commercial establishments, institutions and restaurants, a Filipino Town (shown above) has this distinct set-up - a central area, usually square or plaza, with an imposing Roman Catholic church, a friar's convento, a municipal hall, residences of rich and powerful leaders, a school, social service centers, a transportation terminal and a market place or commercial center.

Although the plaza was modeled after those of Spain and the New World in accordance with Philipp II’s ordinance of July 3, 1573 regulating the foundation of colonial settlements, it was not anything new to Filipinos.

In the 13th century, Chao Ju-kua found that certain port towns of the archipelago contained a public square in front of the ruler’s residence. Ferdinand Magellan’s chronicler Antonio Pigafetta reported the presence of a large square in Cebu, apparently parallel to the waterfront, where Magellan planted the cross and baptized several hundreds of Visayans (ethnolinguistic groups in the Philippines, living in the region of Visayas). Among the Bontocs, (a mountain tribe in the North), the square was and still is an essential feature of the village, for on it the community rituals for the anitos (Pre-Hispanic in the Philippines) were held. It is also recorded that two missionaries who traveled to Ituy in Upper Cagayan “went about through the villages...setting up in the public squares large crosses.”

The colonial plaza was therefore, in a sense, a continuation of the old community square; with important difference the church complex took place of the datu’s house (datu is the title for tribal chiefs, and monarchs in the Philippines) as the focus of community activity. Henceforth it would become increasing common practice to recite prayers at the foot of the tall wooden cross that priests specified as a feature of the plaza.

As Spanish historian and missionary to the Philippine Islands and in 1632, Diego Aduarte noted in Pangasinan (one province in the Philippines), the men gathered together every evening and recited prayers before a cross, “which(u)s usually set-up in the plaza of the village, the women doing the same by themselves in another place." After the mass, parishioners from the cabecera (primary mission) and the visitas (visiting stations of the ‘cabecera’ or primary mission) lingered at the plaza to meet friends and relatives. During processions, fiestas and other religious festivities, the people quite naturally converged on the plaza. (Source: Tadhana: The History of Filipino People, Ferdinand Marcos 1976, pp 154-155).

The institutions in the plaza were designed to pacify and resettle the subjects of colonial masters. The Spanish friars’ policy of reduccion, (which is defined as gathering of converts into one big settlement), is actually a systematic colonial strategy of pacification and deterring native resistance. “Without doubt, the epic of the reduccion gave the friars a great measure of that influence, for their constant presence in the rural community assured them the role of effective intermediary between the Spanish colonial authority and its native base.

During the Philippine-American War (1899-1913), a new version of reduccion was implemented by US military strategists in their pacification campaign. During the pacification campaign, the cabeceras or town centers became “protected zones” and forcibly transformed into real centers of power. Replacing the priests and civil officials, the real power of the town centers were now in the hands of the US Army and troops of Volunteers who administered the affairs of the town and supervised the fight against cholera. Hence, public health, health centers, and public schools became institutions in most Filipino municipalities during the American Occupation (1899-1946).

Before the inception of a Filipino Social Heritage District (SoMa Pilipinas), a number of Filipinos, generations after generations, came to live and work in South of Market since the turn of the 20th century.

FEATURES

The community has, rated and mapped the following independent individual assets.

STANDARDS AND GUIDELINES FOR REVIEW OF NEW CONSTRUCTION

Recommendations for treatment of Filipino Assets

The Filipino community is proposing to follow the general historic preservation policies currently being updated by the San Francisco Planning Department in the cases a current Filipino asset could be changed by a mode of restoration, remodeling or demolition. However, the community wishes to add a set of strict policies to follow in the cases of remodeling including change of use as follows. The recommendations are:

a. To establish a Community Committee that will oversee all change of uses in all commercial zoning, or by requesting to seat in the Historic Preservation Commission currently being established by the San Francisco Planning Department

b. To perpetuate Filipino business by requiring to replace business in-kind with special Administrative Certificate of Appropriateness.

c. To work with the Department of Public Works and support the perpetuation of the Parol Lantern Festival with permanent urban design elements in the form of street lights and pavement.

d. To establish Floor Area Ratio (FAR) exemptions for the replacement of Filipino Social Heritage District assets.

e. Whenever replacement in-kind is impossible, dedicate a portion of the new development to community arts projects or dedicate a portion of the new development for community public events and the arts, following specific criteria for Certificate of Appropriateness.

f. To place commemorative inscription in the sidewalks corresponding to some of the most significant historical and cultural asset in the District, similar to that of the Barbary Coast 2, for educational walking tours.

2 Barbary Coast was a pleasure quarter in old San Francisco CA. The neighborhood quickly took on its seedy character during the California Gold Rush (1848 - 1858). It was known for gambling, prostitution, and crime. It is now overlapped by Chinatown, North Beach, Jackson Square, and the Financial District
FAR standards

In order to maintain and keep the business local as it was originally intended, there will be incentives to help the cases of proposed demolition, and changes of use or economic hardship by:

1. Establishing Floor Area Ratio (FAR) exemptions for the replacement of Filipino Social Heritage District assets.
2. Whenever replacement in-kind is impossible, dedicating a portion of the new development to community arts projects or dedicate a portion of the new development for community public events and arts, following specific criteria for Certificate of Appropriateness.
3. Perpetuating Filipino business by requiring to replace business in-kind with special Administrative Certificate of Appropriateness.
